I am a Lecturer in Health Economics at City St George's, University of London. Prior to that I was a Senior Health Economics Researcher at the Health Economics Research Centre (HERC), University of Oxford, and a Fellow by Special Election at St Edmund Hall, University of Oxford. My research focuses on applied microeconomic analysis of health-related questions. My current work spans three broad areas: frictions which impact healthcare utilisation, metascience, and international comparisons of healthcare resource use. I have substantial teaching experience at undergraduate and postgraduate level, including Health Economics, Microeconomics, and quantitative methods courses. I am an Associate Fellow of the Higher Education Academy.

Additional Experience

Department for Education - Higher Economic Assistant

December 2018 - April 2019

At the Department for Education I worked on two main projects:

- Timpson review of school exclusion - technical note:
The analysis aimed to estimate non-causal associations between a number of school and pupil characteristics and the probability of being excluded. Published report available at this link.
- School-level factors associated with disadvantaged pupil performance: This project involved using statistical learning techniques to analyse the factors most associated with disadvantaged pupil performance.
